

Learning About Instructional Design

Learning Materials	Explanation
What is backwards design?	Learn about backwards design. This is one of the main approaches to designing learning experiences. Begin with the end in mind... What do we want our students to be able to do at the end of the course?
Rubric for Professional Education	How do you know that you designed a good course? There are several rubrics that are used for this. Quality matters is one of the ones used the most.
Human-Centered Design vs. Design-Thinking	Popular terms that every instructional designer knows.
1. Problem Based Learning 2. Social Constructivism 3. Constructivist Learning	Good theory to know.
Competencies of instructional designers	It's good to learn about the competencies of instructional designers.
Bloom's taxonomy Learning Objectives Basics	This is very important as it's used to write learning objectives.
30 things we know about adult learning	Principles that we need to know to design learning experiences for adults
Scaffolding	An important technique for learning
Instructional Strategies	Helps to understand how to think as an instructional designer
Design for How People Learn	A good book to read. At some point we could get one of these at FSI.