

Worksheet — Session 1: Fix These Objectives

Pair work. For each weak objective, name what's wrong — the failure mode (not measurable / instructor-focused / activity-not-learning / inflated verb). The strong rewrite is shown so you can see how each one flips; study the move. On the last one, you write the rewrite. Then write one or two of your own. (Everyday topics on purpose — the skill is the same in any subject.)

Spot the flaw (rewrite shown)

1. Weak: “Students will understand what makes a good presentation.” > What's wrong? _____ > Strong: “Identify three features of an effective presentation.”
2. Weak: “Provide an overview of the onboarding process.” > What's wrong? _____ > Strong: “Complete the onboarding checklist for a new hire.”
3. Weak: “Watch the active-listening training video.” > What's wrong? _____ > Strong: “Paraphrase a speaker's point to confirm understanding.”
4. Weak: “Students will design an original leadership framework from first principles.” (audience: new managers) > What's wrong? _____ > Strong: “Apply a standard 1-on-1 template with a direct report.”
5. Weak: “Students will know the parts of a good email.” > What's wrong? _____ > Strong: “List and describe the parts of a well-structured email.”

Now you try

6. Weak: “Be familiar with the company's expense policy.” > What's wrong? _____ > Your rewrite: _____

Write your own

Draft one or two course-level objectives for your subject — the big things true at the end of the course. Get them solid; you'll finish the rest (and the module objectives that ladder up) as your course takes shape.
